

BURD HAWARD

New to the AR, London-based Burd Haward Architects have produced a number of innovative commercial proposals. Their Green Room, an elegant advancement of the garden shed, was featured in The Architects' Journal's small projects exhibition. This project, Casa Movil, extends this entrepreneurial approach to the holiday lodge. Made off-site and transported to remote locations, it has been designed for a private developer of luxury holiday accommodation in remote sites. Clad in hinged timber panels (which provide protection during transportation to site and out of season), each cabin has been designed to be self sufficient with integrated solar thermal pipework to provide cooling in day and warmth at night. A site has been found in the Spanish Pyrenees near Girona, where six lodges will be located in the sloping grounds of an existing semi-derelict farmhouse. R. G.
